Aperol Spritz

Negroni

Born in the mid-1920's this drink supersedes the Americano. Count Camillo Negroni used to frequent the Casino Bar in Florence and liked his libations with more of a punch than most. He requested that the bartender re-invented his Americano so it came 'with a little more kick'. The soda was removed and replaced with a slug of gin, simple but super tasty.

£7.00

Bellini

Created in 1945 at Harry's New York Bar, Venice by Giuseppe Cipriani. Named after the 15th Century painter Giuseppe Bellini who used the subtle but striking peachy colours for a lot of his canvas paintings.

£7.00

Americano

First served in the 1860's at Gaspare Campari's bar in Milan. Originally named the Milano-Torino cocktail as the Campari can from Milan and the sweet vermouth from Turin. The name changed during prohibition when the Italians noticed an influx of Americans drinking in their towns and cities and the large amounts of forbidden cocktails they consumed.
